To rise to the rank of major-general, commanding officer of the United States arms, has been the dream of ors. My States arm; has been the dream of every youngster who wore the uniform of the West Point cadet. In 1849 a country boy from Canandaigna, in Chautauqua county, New York, entered the military academy. He was studious and quiet, cool and obedient, a hard worker, but never brilliant, One of his instructors said: "Ho'll make a safe soldler, a good man to rely upon." rely upon

Hood executed a sudden night march and delivered a fierce attack on Schofield and Hooker. The losses on both sides were heavy, and atthough Hood fell back, there was little gained on either side. Hooker made an exaggerated report to Sherman of this fight, in which he inferentially blamed Schofield for the fallure to gain a more emphatic victory. For this Hooker received a reproof from Sherman, causing ill-feeling on all sides.

After the Atlanta campaign, Schofield and Thomas kept Hood from moving toward Nashville. He was commander of the army in the victory achieved at Kingston, and March 22, 1865, effected the junction of his forces with those of Sherman at Goldsboro. When under fire, Schofield was as Hood executed a sudden night march

SAVING SEEDS.

Saving SEEDS.

His force at the beginning of the Georgia campaign numbered 12.000 men. It was called the army of the Ohio and had just parsed through the Knoxwille campaign. It was in May of 1864 that General Schofield crossed the Tennessee line into northern Georgia, where Sherman was concentrating his forces for the final annihilation of the stalwart remnant of the Confederacy, under Johnston.

Given Hazardous Work.

In mapping out the campaign, Sherman decided that Schofield should keep in the van occupying the attention of Johnston, by doing the demonstrating. This was a most hazardous strating. This was a most hazardous feature of the campaign, particularly in dealing with a soldler of Johnston's feature of the campaign, particularly in dealing with a soldler of Johnston's feature of the campaign, particularly in dealing with a soldler of Johnston's feature of the campaign, particularly in dealing with a soldler of Johnston's feature of the campaign, particularly in dealing with a soldler of Johnston's feature are few hundred miles away, and in this way many times a garden is a particularly in one place is of no yalice after the final country very year, because out for seeds in this country very year, because is the herolc leader. She was the bioneer in that revoit against infamous absolutes form home gardens, says C. S. Shelby in Farm News. For years we followed the practice of saving seeds for our own use, and we should be appeared to our climate and soil, which shamed our statute books, but is now, happily, only a dismatch of the expense of buying a new supply every year, and gave us a chance to sow seeds of varieties that were adapted to our climate and soil, which is a matter of feature of the campaign, particularly in dealing with a soldier of Johnston's great skill. But Schofield was equal to the task, and in all the battles preceding the fight for Atlanta, he was a potent factor in driving the warriors in grey slowly back from point to point and meeting fierce resistance at every stopping point. For Johnston excelled in the art of holding his opponents at bay while the rear of his army built fortifications and raised entrenchments five or six miles back.

There was fighting every day in that campaign, and some of it rivaled in ferocity the bitterest struggles of the war. In the fight for Resaca, one of Schofield's divisions commanded by Judah hada terrific struggles, losing 600 men in a short time. When the main

While the army was near Dalias, General Schofield was badly injured by his horse falling on him while riding through the thick forest at night, to consult with Sherman. This left him through the thick forest at night, to consult with Sherman. This left him out of the strife for several days. Schoneid and Hooker were associated in all the preliminary battles, but an incident occurred at the battle of Cuif s farm, on June 22, which caused an estrangement between thum. ed in the same way. We never tried to save seeds from radishes or cabbage, as there is a constant improvement in these made by specialists, and if care is taken, better seeds can be bought than home grown. In the matter of cabbage and cauliflowers, especially the carlier sorts, too much care cannot be taken in buying seeds for there is a vast difference in strains in these, and a good early Jersey Wakefield cabbage is as much better than a poor one, as can be imagined.

In saving seeds they should be thoroughly dried, and kept in a place where they will not be exposed to extreme cold, though most of them will endure any degree of weather and grow, but a good many are somewhat sensitive in this respect.
